

Take a leaf-peeking jaunt or a long weekend across Ohio's portion of America's First Transcontinental Road, the Lincoln Highway...

The Lincoln Highway was created in 1913 by several industrialists to become America's FIRST coast-to-coast "rock" highway, connecting New York with San Francisco and creating 3,389 miles of Main Streets across America. Drive this great "retro" road and re-discover an era of America mostly forgotten!

Traveling From West to East...

Beginning in Western Ohio is the charming county seat of Van Wert, and right next to the amazing Second Empire style courthouse is Balyeat's Coffee Shop...been there since 1924! Don't let the "coffee shop" name fool you! It's a full-service restaurant with great meals "like Grandma used to cook" and the pies are incredible, too! 419-238-1580

And there's much more to do and see in Van Wert. Watch for Lincoln Highway markers and monuments throughout town (even Lincoln Highway logos embedded in the cross-walks). info@visitvanwert.org

Turn off the "Lincoln" onto Kidron Road at Shisler's Cheese House and drive 4 beautiful Amish Country miles to Kidron, home of possibly the most unique hardware store in America! Non-electrics, hand tools, kitchenware and much more awaits you at Lehman's! Grab a delicious lunch or snack at the in-store CAST IRON CAFE, too.

Ashland County's gentle hills and farm country, along with university town amenities offer a fun get-away. Two paths of the Lincoln Highway give you a choice of lots to do and see in downtown Ashland or Rt. 30A, which shows you small towns, sweeping hills and a feel for what the road would have looked like in the early automobile era.
