

What a Weekend!

What? Clarksville, Tennessee for the whole weekend. Really Mom? Like I had a choice! But, the road trip was quick and when we got there, was I ever surprised!

Our hotel overlooked a really cool river and was connected to a RiverWalk where we rented bikes. I have to admit, that sunset made a pretty good first impression. Just look at my pictures! We walked into their historic downtown and it was so pretty it could have been a movie set!

We ate the best pizza ever at Blackhorse Brewery. Dad seemed to really enjoy the "adult beverages." There was a concert going on just a block over called Jammin' in the Alley. The stage was right in the street and people were singing along and dancing. Of course, we joined in. Mom and Dad actually danced — together! I wish we'd had time to see the show at the Roxy Regional Theatre. It looked retro, and I'm all about that.

Saturday morning we walked to the Customs House Museum & Cultural Center. There were lots of statues around on the sidewalks of famous people who were from there. My mom said they had great public art. The museum — totally Gothic! I wondered if we'd see Batman. No such luck, but I liked all of the different art and dad loved the history section. We did have a hard time getting my little brother out of the humongous train exhibit downstairs.

We drove over the river to Fort Defiance, a Civil War fort high on the bluff. And, you won't believe it — guys were all dressed up like it was 1850 and they fired a real cannon over the river! We drove out into the county to Historic Collinsville, it's an 1800's living-history settlement. My brother went crazy in the wildlife center and I liked watching the lady make yarn on a loom. Who knew?!

We stopped at Silke's, a German bakery, for a late lunch (YUM!) then ended the day with some shopping then Beachaven Winery. This was my mom's favorite. They sampled all sorts of wine. It must have been really good because there were medals hanging on bottles everywhere. Outside, they were having Jazz on the Lawn. I was glad they really like music here!

On Day 2, we kayaked on a smaller river (what a cool city to have two!) then played disc golf, the only golf mom will tolerate, with a lot of hiking at Rotary Park. We ended our trip with a picnic by the creek then headed home. I hope we go back soon. They were building a new park downtown for even more concerts, plus ice skating. What a fun weekend!

Historic Downtown Clarksville
historicdowntownclarksville.org

Roxy Regional Theatre
roxyregionalthatre.org

Customs House Museum & Cultural Center
customshousemuseum.org

Fort Defiance
cityofclarksville.com/index.aspx?page=161

Historic Collinsville
historiccollinsville.com

Beachaven Winery
beachavenwinery.com

Parks & Recreation
cityofclarksville.com/mcgtm.org
clarksvilleblueway.com

Silke's Old World Breads
www.silkesoldworldbreads.com

Blackhorse Brewery & Pub
blackhorsebrews.com/

VISIT
Clarksville<sup>TM</sup>
TN.COM