Cedar Key National Wildlife Refuge-Cedar Key, Florida

Spend the day paddling out to the closest island of Atsena Otie. This island used to be where everyone lived in the 1800's, farther out in the Gulf where ship traffic was more accessible for travel and trade, now this beautiful, sleepy island is a bird sanctuary and historic cemetery. Island boat tours are available, weather permitting and island accommodations and restaurants are very nice on the island of Cedar Key. Salt water fishing in this part of Florida is excellent and there are many charters available listed under 'Cedar Key'. Scalloping season during summer months can bring in an abundant harvest of these tasty sea treats. Just down the road you'll find Yankeetown, Florida, a wonderful place to start your scalloping adventure. Look for fishing charters listed under 'Explore' on the website below under 'Yankeetown'. Be sure to bring your camera!

Ever wanted to get away for it all? Come explore the wide open spaces of north Florida along the Gulf of Mexico. The pace is slower here, with a tranquil rhythm of birds basking in the sunshine as they wait for the next school of fish to swim by. There's outdoor adventures everywhere; like hiking through one of the many wildlife refuges or paddling your kayak down a winding river or sandy off-shore island. Cedar Key National Wildlife Refuge is a collection of 13 islands and has some of the best nesting areas in Florida for Brown Pelican, Ibis, Egrets, Cormorant, Eagle, Heron, Osprey. Migratory birds are regular visitors to Cedar Key and her neighboring off-shore islands.

Water Taxi or boat tours will drop you off on the islands
